between the years 1091 and 1121, is an interesting specimen of this ancient Irish art. The shrine, a fine example of goldsmith's work, was made to cover and protect the old bell.

The other reproductions newly acquired are: a gold collar, now in the British Museum, two penannular brooches and a hinge brooch, the latter being one of the most beautiful bronze objects in the National Museum at Dublin.

SILVER PLATE.—The recent purchase of seven pieces of Irish silver were now exhibited in the Room of Recent Accessions consists of a flat-top tankard of the time of Queen Anne, two small waiters and two two-handled cups of the latter end of the same century, all made in Dublin, and a creamer made in Cork about 1757.
